PRECISION DIE-CAST SCALE MODELS

THE CORGI STORY...

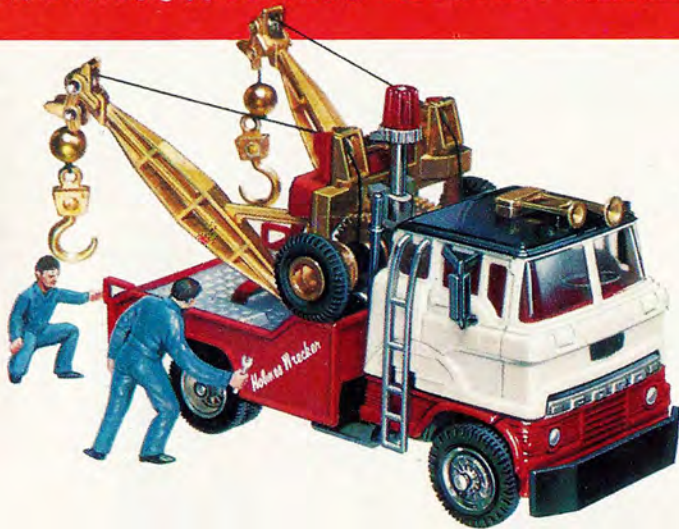

A Corgi model starts its life in the drawing office (1&2) where sometimes over 50 drawings are required for one model. Then on to skilled craftsmen who make enlarged wood and brass mock-ups (3). On go the mock-ups and drawings to the tool-maker (4) who produces the dies from which castings will be made. Ingots of Mazak (insert) are prepared for the die-casting machines from which castings are taken (5) - these castings are churned around in great drums (6) to remove any rough edges. From the barrelling drum the castings are degreased, phosphated, painted and stoved. Fine sprays apply the colour (7) while in another chamber special trim details are added. The Corgi assembly lines (8) are a fantastic sight - a whole motor factory in miniature - wheels, tyres, axles, interiors and all the other "bits and pieces" that go to make the model are manufactured separately and then mated to the chassis. All models have to pass a "road test" by running down a special ramp perfectly (9). Then it's off to the packing department for despatch all over the world (10).
